MARKET COMMENTS

After a strong start to 2025, February delivered slightly negative returns for portfolios overall, as some of the shine came off the US exceptionalism story. Weak US performance dragged on global equities (-2%) as US equities faced significant challenges. Growing uncertainty regarding the impact of the US administration's policy agenda weighed on investor sentiment, and growth concerns re-emerged after softer economic data raised worries over US consumer health. Additionally, US equities were hampered by lingering fears over the sustainability of earnings from US mega cap tech stocks. Global bonds (+0.1%) provided a silver lining for multi-asset investors, which proved to be a diversifier against equity losses. Despite the potential for tariffs to reignite inflation, bond markets focused on US growth risks and allocated to less riskier assets. All major fixed income sectors delivered positive returns over the month, as falling US yields fed through to other parts of the market.

European equities (+2.3%) were the top performing major index as investors increasingly factored in the likelihood of a ceasefire in Ukraine. Financials led the gains with bank shares (+12.3%) continuing to excel amid robust corporate earnings and plans for shareholder returns. Defence stocks (+10.5%) moved markedly on expectations that governments will have to lift military spending. Within the UK, the main index rose (+2%), similarly driven by financials and defence. Despite the BoE cutting rates at the beginning of the month, UK smaller companies underperformed (-2.9%) amid ongoing worries around the domestic economic outlook. Emerging markets remained flat overall, despite continued positive momentum in tech stocks driving Chinese equities to rise 10.5%.
